Barbour Health & Safety

This service supports the information needs of health and safety professionals enabling them to comply with (and enforce) health and safety legislation and implement best practice on health and safety at work above and beyond minimum legal requirements.

Who is it for?

This service is designed primarily to fulfil the information needs of health and safety officers, managers and consultants, auditors, environmental health practitioners, occupational hygienists, researchers, risk managers, safety representatives and students. Users of this service are likely to be working in large organisations, specialist units concerned with occupational health and safety, or training for a professional safety qualification.

What topics does it cover?

The service covers the full extent of topics required by health and safety professionals.

Topics covered include:

- management – health and safety policies, accident investigation, risk assessment, work organisation, arrangements for monitoring and control
- workplace hazards – within a range of industrial sectors
- substances hazardous to health, and their control – including explosives, fibres, dusts, inorganic and organic compounds and wastes. Information includes processing, handling, storage, packaging and labelling, CHIP and COSHH regulations
- administration – reporting, official forms and documentation.

What information sources does it contain?

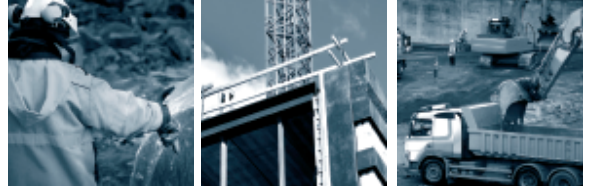

Our services contain collections of documents from hundreds of publishers. Some of the key publishers included in this service are:

- National and EU legislatures
- Parliament and Royal Courts of Justice
- Government (eg HSE, Health Protection Agency, WHO)
- British Standards Institution
- Trade, academic and professional organisations (eg IOSH, CIEH, Safety Assessment Federation, Energy Institute)
- Trades Unions (eg TUC, Unison, GMB, Prospect)
- Health and Safety Authority
- Specialist Publishers (eg BRE, Butterworths, RoSPA)

"Barbour is a comprehensive and user friendly source of information which is an invaluable risk management tool."

What are the benefits?

Saves time

- The comprehensive database means everything you need is in one place
- You can search direct from your desktop – no waiting
- The information you need is easy to find using the powerful search engine

Reduces risk of litigation

- Regular updates keep information up to date
- Regulatory documents are highlighted
- Barbour forms aid 'proof of compliance'

Aids training

- Copy and paste information in to training documents, and procedures
- Use our guides, checklists and weekly briefings to disseminate information fast

Tools to help you

- Summaries – expressed in plain English, these are linked to the full text and allow you to copy and paste information into in-house documents and policies
- Guides, forms and checklists – these tools aid the auditing process and save you creating forms yourself from scratch. The forms are an aid to 'proof of compliance'. The guides also provide a 'ready to go' base for the creation of a health and safety section in induction programmes for new employees, or for use in training courses
- The Briefing – a fast effective way to keep abreast of newly published documents on a weekly basis. You can also cut and paste articles into a newsletter, or create your own 'briefing notes' ahead of meetings to help focus discussion on key issues and actions
- CPD – free seminars, webinars and briefing notes keep you up to date with key industry developments and new publications. They outline the basic principles behind a range of important hot topics, detailing key changes and further reading, and can be used towards a personal CPD programme
